During the history of mankind, competition seems to be one of the most prioritypriorities of human being and there ~~are-is~~ also some recorded history of Olympic games quite back in ancient times in Greece.

Sports as an interesting field and quite a safe era of competition changed ~~his-its~~ role as a simple activity to a vast important phenomenon in the recent decades and even century.

By increasing amount of sports fans, advertising companies found the stadiums a powerful potential for flourishing their goals and as the media changed their broadcasting range and rate, by covering more and more regions of the globe, more money came to the field by investors.

Above all the media, TV had a very rapid impression and success.

At the core of all these events, stood the athletes, who were the main point and the center of all attentions. So that is how the sport professionals came into existence, who earned just a little fraction of the money which they produced for their clubs and investors, which is obviously a great amount of money, compared to any other professions.

A top football player star has to participate in a long energy-consuming daily exercises and there is not any firm guaranty for him to remain at the same step of fame and glory. They often face sport injuries which perish them from the field.

In order to become a successful sport player, one had to sacrifice his life, family and the best period of his life. Many of them have severe serious family problems and face a different world after their retirement and it would be their first death.

It remains always a dilemma: choosing professional sports as vocation with their own troubles or having a normal life.
