March 5 - 8, 2015

New York, New York - March 9, 2015 - art on paper reports an extremely successful first edition with 18,000 visitors and strong sales across the board. art on paper’s 55 exhibiting galleries challenged the notion of what a work on paper can be, presenting sculpture, drawing, painting, photography, large-scale installation, and drawings by artists from around the world. Visitors were met with a bright, airy space highlighting Pier 36’s high ceilings and natural light. Many stayed for hours, enjoying a festive atmosphere with great food and drink, a bookstore of artist books, and a general feeling of welcome and excitement featuring truly excellent art.

SALES HIGHLIGHTS
Sales were strong across the board, with exhibitors pleased with the fair’s high production level, attendance numbers, general reviews, and venue. Many commented on the audience’s knowledge and enthusiasm, noting the attendance of top collectors, curators, advisors, and scholars. Sales highlights include JHB Gallery’s placement of five works in a private European collection just before opening, including several sculptures by Doug Beube that fit beautifully within the book-driven international collection’s theme. The gallery had success throughout the weekend, selling a majority of available works. Joshua Liner Gallery reported brisk sales of Wayne White works on paper from a new series the artist created during a residency in Key...
West. The sales highlight White's popularity at art on paper - his monumental installation FOE drew major crowds from the fair's opening moments. Catharine Clark Gallery placed an American Qur'an work by Sandow Birk. The incredible series of illustrated pages of the Qur'an transcribed in its entirety (and translated into English) have garnered significant attention from the media and collectors alike since Birk undertook the massive project nine years ago. Jill Newhouse Gallery placed several pieces with new collectors including a rare Delacroix drawing from the mid 1800's. Sasha Wolf, art on paper's Creative Director saw strong sales from her eponymous gallery's enthralling solo exhibition of photographer Adam Katseff's River Series with all wall-sized photographs sold. Richard Levy placed several major works including a print series by Alex Katz. The Hole’s solo booth of Rose Eken sculpture was a great success, with many works sold throughout the fair. Hespe Gallery sold Robert Townsend's Close Cover, 2014 - a striking watercolor of rows of colorful matchbooks, during the art on paper Brooklyn Museum Preview Benefit and finished the night with the placement of an elegant charcoal on paper by Annie Murphy-Robinson. Newcomer VICTORI+MO sold out their booth of all finely cut paper works by Eric Standley, with a long wait-list to boot. Electric Works’ solo presentation of Dave Eggers works on paper saw strong sales all weekend. The gallery sponsored the Dave Eggers Untitled glory bunny installed just outside the fair’s entrance that garnered much notice through the run of the fair. Galerie 103 placed several Tom Lieber monotypes in New York City collections. The artist’s well known abstract paintings sit in many major museums, and Galerie 103’s exhibition afforded visitors the opportunity to see an often overlooked aspect of his oeuvre. Gallery Molly Krom placed several Elizabeth Gourlay works with new collectors from Moscow and California. Three Kings Studio reported strong sales from their solo presentation of Dan Sabau watercolor with the gallery owner proclaiming art on paper the “nicest looking fair I’ve been to in ten years.” Traywick Contemporary sold several Dharma Strasser MacColl paper, gouache, porcelain compositions to local private collectors. Nancy Hoffman of her eponymous gallery praised the fair’s quality and approachability, grateful of the opportunity “to honor paper” in its “immediacy and intimacy.”

Gallery, Wayne White's larger-than-life, hand-cut sculptures constructed of cardboard dominated the fair's front lounge creating a forest of giant puppets telling the story of a Civil War battle. JHB Gallery enhanced the fair's entrance with Mia Pearlman's colossal suspended paper cloudscape, Maelstrom, 2008. Forum Gallery presented a 10-foot-long charcoal on paper from William Beckman's Bull Series, a fitting nod to the fair's new proximity to the bulls of Wall Street. Dave Eggers' Untitled - blown into oversized proportions - welcomed the public to art on paper with its towering rabbit image shouting “glory” along the fair's front promenade.
