Speculative Applications

Many individuals find work experience in the country through their networks, making speculative applications (GoinGlobal is useful here), and also through social media (Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn).

Using Chambers of Commerce in the country is another way of generating a list of potential employers to contact.

Social Media can be a great resource to assist you further when speculatively applying for jobs. For more information visit: Social Media

Taking Advantage of Time Away

The Taking Advantage of Time Away website contains resources and advice to help you make the most of your time away by reflecting on the experiences you are having – while you are having them. Reflecting like this is important when thinking about marketing your experience to employers – it will also help you to see how you have developed personally and professionally by going away.
