

An annotated bibliography is a list of references to books and articles that have been published on a given topic. Unlike a reference list at the end of an essay, each citation is followed by a paragraph (the annotation) that briefly summarises and evaluates the content of the writing. The purpose of the annotation is to inform the reader of the writing's relevance, accuracy, and quality.

Layout

The annotation may be descriptive (see parts 1-3 below); or descriptive and evaluative (see parts 1-5 below). Check what your lecturer requires you to do. The layout should follow this order:

Example of a bibliography entry (in APA format)

1. Citation one space	Palomo-lovinski, N., & Hahn, K. (2014). Fashion design industry impressions of current sustainable practices. Fashion Practice , 6 (1), 87–106. doi: 10.2752/175693814X13916967094911
2. Introduction	This article examines existing sustainable practices within the fashion industry and explores the possible links to design education. The authors propose that sustainability is largely ignored by the industry and changes are needed at the tertiary level to install real knowledge around environmental and social concerns. They highlight the shortcomings in the curricula by surveying 35 working designers with tertiary qualifications. The main limitation of the article is that the research was conducted exclusively in the USA and did not take into account any reforms in design education that may be occurring elsewhere.
3. Summary
4. Credibility
5. Evaluation	Therefore, while this article is useful to draw attention to unsustainable practices in the fashion industry, it may not truly reflect practices here in New Zealand.

Parts	Examples
1. Citation	Example of an APA reference Drewery, W. (2004). Human development in Aotearoa: A journey through life . Auckland, New Zealand: McGraw-Hill.
2. Introduction	Examples of sentence starters In this article, Drewery reviews/examines/reports/describes/researches ... The author's purpose is to/investigate/challenge/highlight/reveal/show/define... This article outlines/looks at/focuses on/contrasts/aims to ...
3. Summary	The main findings of the study include/are/show/identify ... The author describes/relates/demonstrates/concludes/compares/argues ... The research methodology comprises/uses/includes ...
4. Credibility	The author provides a strong theoretical ... One limitation of this study is ... There is a lack of supporting evidence which ...
5. Evaluation	It is relevant to this writer's own research because ... This article will assist ... Because the article is recent and from a reliable source ... As the results of the research cannot be ...

Writing style

An annotated bibliography is a piece of formal academic writing and follows the general rules for all academic writing:

- Arrange in alphabetical order.
- Write in a single paragraph (usually about 100-300 words, but check with your lecturer).
- Write in full sentences using academic writing style.
- Generally, present tense, impersonal writing, should be used.
- Use transition words (e.g. furthermore, moreover, however, therefore ...).
- Be concise – mention only significant details in your summary.
- Do not repeat information (e.g. the title) that is already in your citation.
- Do not cross reference i.e. use any in-text references as you are only writing about a single text.

For more information on annotated bibliographies go HERE

To watch a short video on annotated bibliographies go HERE

Reference

University of New England. (n.d.). Writing an annotated bibliography. Retrieved from http://www.une.edu.au/__data/assets/pdf_file/0008/11132/WE_Writing-an-annotated-bibliography.pdf

