Teaching Ideas: Read Like a Writer; Introduction to different writing genres

Byrne, R. (2016). This book is out of control! New York: Holt

Bella and Ben, the characters from This Book Just Ate My Dog (2014) and We're in the Wrong Book (2015), are back in another interactive story about a remote control toy that's on the fritz.

Caswell, D. (2016). Guess who, haiku. (B. Shea, Illus.). New York: Abrams.

A very simple introduction to haiku style of Japanese poetry. All the poems in the books are riddles. If you are using this book as a guessing game, I would suggest not showing the illustrations right away as they are full of clues.

Teaching Ideas: Poetry, Haiku, Riddles

Dotlich, R. K. (2015). One day, the end: Short, very short, shorter-than-ever stories. (F. Koehler, Illus.). Honesdale, PA: Boyds Mills.

"For every story there is a beginning and an end, but what happens in between makes all the difference." So begins this one-of-a-kind book where the middle of each story is told solely with illustrations.

Teaching Ideas: Use illustrations to describe characters, settings, and events (See TLT p. 127); Launching Writing Workshop—Little Book Ideas

Guiberson, B. Z. (2016). The deadliest creature in the world. (G. Spirin, Illus.) New York: Holt. The author/illustrator team that brought us The Greatest Dinosaur Ever (2013) and The Most Amazing Creature in the Sea (2015) have another intriguing offering. In this book, fourteen creatures from a golden poison dart frog to a Komodo dragon vie for the title of the deadliest creature in the world.

Teaching Idea: Communicate Opinions (T. L. T. pp.134-135)

O'Byrne, N. (2014). Use your imagination (But be careful what you wish for!) Somerville, MA: Candlewick.

One day, rabbit is bored. Along comes wolf posing as a librarian. Together they begin to "write" a story about a wolf and a rabbit. When wolf decides to chase and eat rabbit, rabbit uses his imagination to blast wolf into space.

Teaching Ideas: Writing workshop; Traditional Tales; Imagination

Saltzberg, B. (2015). Inside this book (are three books). New York: Abrams.

Seymour's mom gives he and his siblings some blank little books. Seymour fills his with things he sees, hears, and his story. His sister Fiona makes a poetry book and his little brother Wilbur draws pictures and dictates his story.

Teaching Idea: Writing Workshop—Little Books (See T.L.T. pp. 65-67)

Twohy, M. (2016). Oops pounce quick run! An alphabet caper. New York: HarperCollins.

Written in alphabetic words and phrases, we follow the lively action of a dog chasing a mouse around the house. In the end, the mouse gives the dog a present and they become friends.

Teaching Ideas: Unique alphabet books; Springboard for writing

BOOKS FOR S. T. E. M.

Harkness, A. (2016). Bug zoo. New York: Disney/Hyperion.

Ben loves bugs and wants to open a bug zoo, but no matter how many bugs he collects, no one visits. Finally, he realizes that the bugs want to be free so he lets them go and uses the jars for honey.

Teaching Ideas: Pair with Fireflies (Brinkloe, 1986); Science—Insect Unit

Hood, S. (2016). Leaps and bounce: A growing up story. New York: Disney/Hyperion.

Poetic text and unique page design with several gatefolds (an oversized page that is folded into the book) take readers on a journey through a frog's life cycle.

Teaching Ideas: Life Cycle of a Frog; Repeated Line (Changes come to all who grow)

Judge, L. (2016). Hoot and Peep. New York: Dial.

This book is set in Paris and stars two adorable owls. Older brother Hoot wants to teach Peep "all his owly wisdom" but instead she wants to "sing about the mystery of things." Eventually Hoot realizes that Peep is on to something.

Teaching Ideas: October Animals; Individuality; Family (Siblings)

Logelin, M., & Jensen, S. (2016). Be glad your dad . . . is not an octopus! (J. Chapman, Illus.). New York: Little, Brown.

A humorous look at what would happen if your dad was an iguana, a skunk, a dung beetle, and more! A note at the end of the book gives readers more information about the animals in the book.

Teaching Ideas: Animal Dads; Fiction/Nonfiction Blend; Pair with Animal Dads (Collard, 2000)

Rhyming text and realistic oil paintings take you through a year with a mother American Black Bear and her two cubs. An informative author's note details the difference between true hibernators (toads, groundhogs, bats, and snakes) and the winter lethargy of bears.

Teaching Ideas: Narrative nonfiction; Author's Note

Messner, K. (2015). Up in the garden and down in the dirt. (C. S. Neal, Illus.). San Francisco, CA: Chronicle.

A girl and her grandmother plant, care for, and harvest their garden while readers learn about what is happening under the ground. Read this book in the spring, during a science unit on plants, or to inspire writers to use sensory language. You can also help listeners notice the repetitive "see-saw" structure, "Up in the garden/Down in the dirt" that they could borrow in their own writing.

Teaching Ideas: Sensory Language; See-Saw Structure

Murray, D. (2016). City shapes. (B. Collier, Illus.). New York: Little, Brown.

With kaleidoscope in hand, a little girl (Bryan Collier's daughter) leads us through the city in search of shapes.

Teaching Ideas: Math, Geometry

Yolen, J. (2016). What to do with a box. (C. Sheban, Illus.). Mankato, MN: Creative Editions.

Jane Yolen's poetic text invites readers to consider the endless possibilities that a simple brown box plus an imagination offer.

Teaching Idea: Imagination

JUST FOR FUN!

Graves, K. (2016). Puppy! New York: Roaring Brook.

Cave boy Trog wants a puppy. So, he nabs an unsuspecting baby dinosaur and brings him home. Much to the chagrin of his family, all the dinosaur does is cry and eat. Soon Trog realizes that the dinosaur misses his family.

Teaching Ideas: Use illustrations to describe characters, settings, and events (See T.L.T. p. 127); Read with other cave boy books like Little Grunt and the Big Egg (dePaola, 1990/2006)

Jarvis. (2016). Alan's big, scary teeth. Somerville, MA: Candlewick.

Alan the alligator is best known for scaring with his "razor-sharp" teeth. Find out what happens when the animals discover Alan's secret—his teeth are fake.

BOOK TRAILER: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZTVaTrfzGNE>

Teaching Idea: Pair with Grandpa's Teeth (Clement, 1999)

Parr, T. (2016). Teachers rock. New York: Little, Brown.

A celebration of the passion teachers pour into their profession.

Teaching Ideas: Beginning of Year; Gift Book for Student Teachers

Redeker, K. (2016). Don't splash the sasquatch! (B. Staake, Illus.). New York: Disney/Hyperion. In the sequel to Don't Squish the Sasquatch! (2012), Sasquatch is relaxing by the pool hoping not to get splashed because his fur "gets all squizzlefied." As expected, the animals that come to the pool splash him.

Teaching Idea: End of Year/Summer

Zuill, A. (2016). Wolf camp. New York: Schwartz & Wade.

Homer the dog is yearning to attend wolf camp. Fortunately, his family lets him go and there he learns the ups and downs of being a wolf.
