THE FIELD OF ADULT SERVICES

SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE AND ADMINISTRATION

Gary M. Nelson, Ann C. Eller, Dennis W. Streets, and Margaret L. Morse, Editors

The Field of Adult Services helps define the complex world of adult services delivery by examining the specialized body of values, knowledge, and skills that constitute the field. It presents a clear model for the field by combining an overview of key skills with a framework for excellence in adult services practice. It also describes administrative structures for adult services programs and service offerings under various state and local programs.

This text builds clinical skills, as well as skills in strategic planning and management, and program and staff development. Case examples help readers identify and overcome barriers to optimal practice. The Field of Adult Services affirms the role of adult services practitioners and helps them develop new skills that will increase their job satisfaction and obtain optimal outcomes for their clients.

Faculty who teach courses on social work and aging will use this text to help students identify, develop, and promote good practice. Chapters are written to stand alone, with cross-references to aid the reader in making comparisons across service areas. The book is also a useful reference tool for supervisors, managers, and administrators in state and area agencies on aging.
